(Printer Friendly) : More Nintendo DS Games : HeartGold Gold Versions New HeartGold The Pokémon HeartGold and SoulSilver is a compilation of Pokémon Gold, Silver and Pokémon Ruby & Sapphire, and includes new features such as the ability to trade with Pokémon Black and White. The game was released on August 14, 2010, for the Nintendo DS. Contents The game will be split into two major game modes. The first, Treasure Hunt, is a single player mode that includes a randomly generated team of Pokémon and teaches the player basic Pokémon gameplay and basic training. The player uses an obelisk to look for hidden items throughout the game, primarily to keep the levels and difficulty low, but still requires the player to use their own Pokémon. Each time the player finds an item, they can save their game. Once the player has collected 30 items, they can become the Trainer of their choice, the player that unlocked the Pokémon. This mode introduces the idea of rival Pokémon to the game. The second game mode, Battle Tower, is a multi-player battle mode with the opponent known as the Champion. HeartGold differs from Gold and Silver in many ways. The main change is that the player can now use their Pokémon from both of the previous games, allowing them to catch a new generation of Pokémon. In addition to that, the player's overworld is now split into two: one for the Diamond and Pearl games, and one for the Platinum, Ruby, and Sapphire games. The items and Battle Tower are the same as the previous games, but the Gym Leader Leader battles are entirely new. There are also new Battle scenes that include trading Pokémon back and forth between the two overworlds, as well as a new cutscene in which the player has to compete in the National Tournament. The main difference between the Platinum and HeartGold versions of the game is that the Trainer Battles differ slightly. Most of the changes are minor, but there are a few differences. The Gym leader battle is now located in the overworld of HeartGold, making it easier for the player to trade between the two overworlds. The Battle Tower game mode has been reworked. Most of the changes are minor; however, the main difference is that the Champion now has to build up a friendship with the player's Pokémon and they can be called to assist them. The only other difference is that the Battle Tower is now surrounded by a gyroscope. Some of 82157476af
